

Ethel Ridley

“Yes, it was, when you went through the double gates into the grounds there was a hall, a long, they were all long low buildings made of Canadian pine, and there was a, a long hall which was the hall where we had assembly and gym and things like that, on the right there was Miss Evans’ flat and the camp, what would you call it, the man who looked after it. And then, in the middle there was a green quadrangle, we weren’t allowed to walk on the grass, we always had to walk around the path. On the far side there were four classrooms, er, a small hospital, this is on the far side, and then there was a science room, and two dormitories, one next to the science room and one lying back. Across the top was a dining room, which had the staff room at one end and the tuck shop at the other room, end, on the near side there was, there was a hall and as you walked down you came to two dormitories, then a wash block, and then our dormitory further on the other side of the wash block. Across the bottom it just looked onto the wood at the bottom.”