

Joyce Bailey

“Then you used to just listen to the radio, you know, no tele like, listen to the radio, perhaps play ludo or something like that you know, erm, but you can remember, you know from when you were small you can remember even when we lived in the house when I was only six or seven, the one that belonged to the mill, I can remember some of the programmes from then you know, and it was and on Friday nights we had our tin bath across the hearth because there were no bathroom or nothing and there was a boiler where we used to get our hot water from, so we used to have a, and while we were having a bath there used to be a programme on called In Town Tonight and then there was Henry Hall, he had a dance band, he had a band you know that used to be on, and he used to say and then In Town Tonight they used to sing (SINGS) “in town tonight, in town tonight” that was the song they played on it, their signature tune you know? I remember another song they used to play, they used to sing (SINGS) “come, come, come, says jolly Mr. Plum, what’s the use of worrying when things look glum, never mind the weather we will always stick together, come, come, come, jolly Mr. Plum” (LAUGHS).”