Getting up yes, having a wash and getting dressed and before Mrs Potts had got breakfast ready, we would go out start collecting some of the eggs and then all those we collected were put in what called the cornshed. Go back into the house, have breakfast, and then go to school and then when we got home from school we'd changed into our older clothes because usually it meant washing dirt off the eggs and so on, cleaning out the hen houses that sort of thing, feeding all the turkeys and what have you. And then we'd go back in and have our tea. Then after tea if there wasn't any more work to do on the poultry farm we'd go out and play with the local lads.
