

Ivy Field

“...we were put on a coach in the centre of Birmingham, I’ve an idea it was outside the Hall of Memory but I’m not certain about that, but we boarded this coach and it was the most beautiful June day, June 7th 1940, and I was just entranced by the countryside, the blue sky, the white clouds, the sheep in the fields I thought it was great, and when we got to Pipewood we all just tipped out because we could see bracken and woods and all that sort of thing, and we were told which direction to run and I remember running from the coach so excited to the dormitory.”
