“...it was very hot in August and we were dumped into this school in this village Onecote and apparently I had a label round my neck which, ‘cause I was covered in heat spots and this little label said I’d got nothing catching, that it was just heat spots. And erm, the people who took me, people came to er, I don’t know they gathered round and you know they were going to take kids. The lady who took me was going to, she was going to take a girl because she had a daughter Betty, and erm, but apparently I was sitting there crying my eyes out and er, one of the people said you know “could you take him away he’s going to set everybody else off” (laughs).”
