“Well, it’s open countryside, we arrived at the school and they had a tea for us, and then a man, a local man took three of us to our destination sort of thing and I remember it was such a long walk, it was a mile walk along this country lane. And he dropped me off and half a mile down he dropped the second one off and then he dropped the third lad off. And erm, it was so open sort of thing, it was more open than Norfolk ‘cause Norfolk was rural but nowhere near as rural as Swythamley.”
